WEDDING REQUIREMENTS

Fijian Weddings are internationally recognised and are legally binding.

Each Couple will be escorted to the registry office in Nadi, Lautoka, Sigatoka or Suva to register their intent to marry. Most wedding packages include the cost of the wedding licence (and transfers to/from the registry office) as well as the help of a wedding co-ordinator who will guide you through this process.

Most offices are open from 9am - 3pm Monday to Friday (closed on public holidays) and appointments generally take only 15 to 30 minutes.

It is important to note both bride and groom will need to present an original or certified copy of their respective birth certificates as well as their passports. If either party were previously married, a copy of the divorce papers or death certificate of the former spouse must also be presented. If either party was married within the last five years, a Certificate of Single Status may be required.

Some properties require you to stay at least 3 nights prior to the wedding ceremony to ensure sufficient time to obtain your license.

Note: Weddings are not conducted in Fiji on Sundays and public holidays.

Other conditions may apply.
